OLD Mother Nature is a very good mistress. She solves problems for us in a very simple and a very wonderful way. And she is always right. Now, in prehistoric times—the Stone Age, etc., about which historians tell us such wonderful things—there was a never-ending war—so to speak. Man versus Beast—and man, being the more intelligent, if not the stronger from a physical point of view, certainly appears to have carried off what laurels there may have been in that interesting if painful contest. Of course, the protagonists were actuated by decidedly different motives. Mr. Beast had only one ambition: world-power through the destruction of Mr. Man. On the other hand, Mr. Man recognised in those stony days that a slacker in his camp had no chance against a ruthless and uncompromising, if less intelligent, opponent. He also recognised that in victory there rested not only true self-defence, but something worth while in the way of spoils.

You see even then Mr. Man was up against the problem of clothing, and Nature hinted that many animals, particularly the Fur-Bearing species, provided a solution of the difficulty—a solution which spelled permanent protection against the weather: so long as Mr. Man fought and won. And ever since those remote days Furs have been voted by the human species as the acme of perfection in the matter of clothing, not only on account of the comfort and protection they afford, but more important still by reason of their durability and an appearance that suits the elegance of a Gentlewoman, the dignity of a Duchess, or the majesty of a Queen.

It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that with the growth of intelligence, or civilisation if you will, men perceived the commercial value of Fur, and appreciated by barter its equivalent in other goods. Indeed, a famous picture representing the birth of commerce in Britain shows that Fur was one of the commodities exchanged for the tin of Old England.

According as the facilities for travel were developed the demand for Fur increased, and this condition created obvious opportunities for daring and enterprising men who calculated, and calculated correctly, that there would be ample reward for the financial and personal risk attendant upon exploring practically unknown regions in trying climates, and tracking Fur-Bearing animals to their dens. The earlier efforts in this direction proved so entirely successful that corporations and companies were formed under Government licence as far back as the 17th Century—who has not heard of the famous Hudson Bay Company—and the development has been so regular that the obtaining of Furs is now a scientific proposition, both as regards animals in the wild state and in captivity. In this connection, however, it is right to say that science has played its most important part in the dressing of the Skins and the dyeing of the Furs. As a matter of fact the latter development is one of the chief—if not the main—contributory causes of the really tremendous expansion of this important industry in recent years.

As the trade stands to-day prices are quite out of proportion to what they were before the arrival of the Land Ship and the U-Boat era. But the standard of value is changing in every direction and almost every day. It is not likely, however, that there will soon be any appreciable abatement in the price of Fur. Existing conditions preclude such an assumption.

Fur, as has been pointed out, was originally a necessity, now it is regarded as a luxury, and it is a luxury, in the sense that it is incomparable for comfort, elegance, or durability. Consequently when you purchase this commodity from a reliable firm—such as Barnardos of Dublin—you are receiving permanent value for every penny you invest, and surely this is another reason why Fur should be termed a luxury in these fickle days of constantly changing values.

WHEN comfort and elegance are united with fashion and quality in Fur Garments at reasonable prices, you may take it for granted you are receiving permanent value for every penny you invest. The garments illustrated on this sheet demonstrably embody all the foregoing virtues, particularly in the matter of price, because for a variety of reasons we are holding

A CHRISTMAS SALE

Which will continue from to-day until 31st December. The chief reason for this unusual departure lies in the fact that we hold a tremendous stock of the Highest Grade Furs, which we purchased for our New Premises at 21 Grafton Street, and which we now regret to learn will not be available elsewhere. We have, however, hoped to enter these sales will not be available elsewhere. We have, however, hoped to enter these sales will not be available elsewhere. It is quite unlikely there will be any reduction in the ordinary price of Furs this season, because the supplies are small and the demand is increasing—therefore those who take advantage of this Sale will probably congratulate themselves later on. We give particulars beneath of some of our models with prices, and would point out that we guarantee complete satisfaction to every customer—this has been our successful policy since 1819.

3/- NOTICE During this Sale all the prices quoted above will be reduced by 3/- THREE SHILLINGS IN THE POUND

In addition to the items illustrated on this page we have a very choice range of FUR NECK BANDS in all the fashionable styles and skins from 15/- each. Very useful and most comely FOOT MUFFS from 25/- each. TRIMMINGS, RUGS, and FUR-LINED GLVES from 25/- per pair. TRIMMINGS, 1 inch wide, in all the leading Furs, from 3/- per yard.

PRICES DURING THE WAR.

THE RISE IN THE COST OF NECESSITIES.

UNITED KINGDOM AND OTHER COUNTRIES COMPARED.

The following tables have been prepared showing the broad effect of control in the price of the principal foods, and the contrast between the rise in food prices in this and in other countries.

With regard to the tables, certain general remarks may be made. The system of control has been most effective in the case of meat, without difficulty, in the case of the chief articles of food. It has not been practicable to apply it to fish, vegetables, fruit, and cereals. The Nationalised Foods Control Board has been able to fix the prices of meat, bacon, ham, sausages, and other articles, the effect of control in the price of the principal foods, and the contrast between the rise in food prices in this and in other countries.

Mr. MAGNELL AND THE IRISH PARTY.

A meeting was held in support of the candidate of Mr. Joseph O'Doherty in Inishowen.

Mr. Magnell said that in that General Election the contest was not between two parties.

At the present time there are already three candidates.

Mr. J. H. Jordan, who was a candidate for the Sinn Féin, was not adopted as a candidate by the Committee.

A special meeting will be held tomorrow to select candidates for other constituencies.

MEETINGS IN NORTH MEATH.

The campaign in North Meath opened yesterday at Kells, Spink in support of Mr. Edward Carson.

Mr. Carson's speech was received with enthusiasm.
